Effingham Public Library hosts One-Day Book Sale on November 23

The Suzette Brumleve Memorial Effingham Public Library will host a one-day book sale from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, November 23.

The Book Sale will offer a wide variety of new, lightly used and vintage books, including mysteries, new non-fiction and children's books.

Other categories available include: history, suspense, cooking, Christian, large print, politics, military, biographies, nature, sports, travel, gardening, romance, sci-fi, self-improvement and more. In addition, a large selection of DVDs, CDs and audiobooks are available for sale.

Children's books will be sold in a special area that allows easier access for strollers.

Additionally, there will be a special cart of Christmas, and Christmas-themed books.

Shoppers who have frequented previous sales will find that some genres/categories of books have been moved and some new categories created. Additionally, some categories have been broken down into sub-categories to allow for locating a title and/or subject quickly and easily.

No items will be sold prior to the book sale date. Book donations are accepted at the library check out desk during regular library hours. Proceeds from the sale will go toward special projects at the library.

If you have questions about the book sale, please call the library at 342-2464 x1 or email info@effinghamlibrary.org
